Wednesday, March 14—Friday Morning Music Club—Members of the critically acclaimed Friday Morning Club will present an evening of classical music. These young performers represent a range of some of the most talented music students in the Washington, D.C. area.

Wednesday, March 21—Tales in the Village featuring Noa Baum—Noa Baum was raised in Jerusalem and holds a bachelors degree in fine arts from Tel Aviv University and a masters degree in educational theater from New York University. She was an actress with the Khan Repertory Theater of Jerusalem and studied with acclaimed acting teacher Uta Hagen in NY. She has several artist awards from the Maryland State Arts Council and the Arts & Humanities Council of Montgomery County. “Storytelling is the intersection of my work as a performance artist, educator, and diversity specialist,” says Baum. “For me, story is both performance art and tool for change. I love connecting with people through stories. I use storytelling to entertain, build bridges of understanding, and offer pathways to dialogue and peace.”

Wednesday, March 28—The Brothers Flanagan—The month of March wouldn’t be the same without a little “blarney.” Join us as we celebrate a belated St. Patrick’s Day with the Brothers Flanagan. The group includes members Darrell Parsons and Robert Daniel Bunning, Bernie Kellett, and Bob Schiff. Drawing from backgrounds in barbershop music, songwriting, and formal training in classical voice and music, this talented quartet offers a unique blend of harmony and a bit of the “blarney.”
